MCYU's 10th anniversary celebration

"The Return of Nature"
with Wayne Terryberry
September 18, 2021

Explore the possible ecological restoration and the environmental significance that might happen at McMaster University.

"The Root of Trees" with Dr Myles Sergeant October 23, 2021

Trees are an important part of our landscape and well-being. Together we'll learn why we need trees, how to plant them, and how to create more urban forests.

"Indigenous Traditional Ecological Knowledge" with Dr Adrienne Xavier
November 27, 2021

Explore how Indigenous culture, community, food and environment all work together and impact how we know the things we know.

"Revolutionizing Food Allergy and Anaphylaxis" with Dr Derek Chu January 29, 2022

Explore what food allergies are, how we can prevent them and the different types of treatment. Discover how McMaster is reimagining food allergy and anaphylaxis.

"Can Everyone be a Leader?" with Dr Alpha Abebe
March 26, 2022

Have you ever wondered what being a leader means? Together we will learn how young people develop leadership skills in a world that does not always listen to or take you seriously.

"A Fascinating Universe" with Julie Bolduc-Duval
February 26, 2022

Join us for an out of this world lecture where we will learn about the beauty and complexity of space.

"Don't trust an atom, they make up everything!" with
Samantha Stambula
April 30, 2022

How can one thing make up everything? Atoms are unique building blocks and work together to form different materials through the way they interact. Together we will explore how atoms form different materials and why it is a big deal!

"Learning with Art at the McMaster Museum of Art" with Teresa Gregorio and Nicole Knibb
May 28, 2022

Let's discover how thinking like an artist can teach us to look at the world differently. It can help us design, empathize, and imagine a better future that we can all build together.
